2. Paragraph Alignment, Line Spacing & Lists

[Centered (Headings & Quotes)] This paragraph is centered. Ideal for titles, invitations, and callout quotes.

Bulleted, Numbered, and Multilevel Lists:

- Standard Disc Bullet: Fundamental list element.

Square Bullet: Modern corporate bullet design.

- Checkmark Bullet: Task completion status indicator.

Arrowhead Bullet: Sequential transition marker.

1. Phase 1: Architecture review and functional requirements audit.

Phase 2: Component implementation and TipTap schema extensions.

2. Phase 3: Visual regression testing and OOXML round-trip verification.

6. Multi-Column Newspaper Layout (Section Break)

CONFIDENTIAL

Column One: Desktop document editors provide advanced page setup capabilities, including complex sectioning, alternating headers and footers, and newspaper-style multi-column formatting. Each section maintains independent geometry, margin widths, and line numbering rules.

Column Two: In a true Word-compatible architecture, multi-column blocks flow naturally across page breaks. Columns can be formatted with equal or custom fractional widths, and an optional vertical separator line can be rendered between gutters for editorial publication.
